Harrisburg, Pa., August 14.—The Reading railroad iron bridge across the canal near the depot broke down this afternoon while a heavy coal train was passing over. Twenty cars were wrecked but nobody was hurt.

—On the first night of "A Crown of Love," Anne Boleyn had no sooner uttered the words, "Now is the crown fixed firmly on my head," than the regal diadem set the auditors and actress laughing by tumbling to the ground. An accident not so annoying to the individual most concerned as the gallery commentary upon a dunedin the canal near the depot broke down this afternoon while a heavy coal train was passing over. Twenty cars were wrecked but nobody was hurt. -On the first night of "A Crown of ly metinction from another "god" who, seeing Macbeth cover his face with his robe and shudder convulsively after crying, "Unreal mockery, hence!" to Banquo's ghost, let him know the horrible shadow had departed by shouting, "It's all right, governor; he's gone."
